Appendix 4. Daily Casualty Count of Afghan Civilians Killed by U.S Bombing and Special Forces Attacks, October 7 until present day

I dedicate this file to the memory of the countless Afghans just engaged in simple acts of everyday living across the vast and beautiful land of Afghanistan, who became the innocent victims of the horrific U.S. air and ground onslaught begun at 9 PM on October 7, 2001. Were they only able to ride a bicycle in the rain - or tears - of Kabul.

Compiled by and excerpted from Marc W. Herold, "A Dossier on Civilian Victims of United States' Aerial Bombing of Afghanistan: A Comprehensive Accounting" [Durham, N.H,: unpublished manuscript, Departments of Economics and Women's Studies, University of New Hampshire, December 2001]. Professor Herold [B.Sc., M.B.A., Ph.D Econ] has been on the faculty of the University of New Hampshire since the fall of 1975, specializing in the area of Third World economic and social development.

The number of Afghan civilian "impact deaths[1]" is estimated to be 3,100 - 3,600. The breakdown by month is:

DATES	LOW COUNT	HIGH COUNT
October/2001	931	1,148
No date available/2001	186	186
November/2001	961	1,073
December/2001-Current	995	1,190
(only Oct, 7 - Dec, 10 - 2001)	(2,567)	(2,947)
(only Dec, 20/2001-Current)	(489)	(633)
TOTAL	3,073	3,597

Data in [ ] is deemed unrelieble because either questionable sources or military casualties

[1]An 'impact death' is defined as one caused at the immediate point of explosion or shooting. Because it ignores the injured who die later, it represents a minimum number.

Many people have inquired whether the data released publicly on December 10th has been up-dated. As the weeks have gone by, more information has emerged from Afghanistan which has allowed three revisions: [1]. some counts in reported incidents earlier have been revised; [2]. incidents which had erroneously reported as being separate have been combined [e.g., Kama Ado and Madoo]; and [3]. additional bombing attacks which occurred between December 20th and and date above have been added.

Lewa Sarhadi, where Bin Laden established the Tarnak Farm camp, in the Sapora region	Kandahar		0	0	3 large bombs	early Wed., US planes hit old Al Qaeda camp, Tarnak Farms, 90 kms so. of Kandahar, and 5 kms. east of US base. AL Qaeda abandoned the camp in November. Tarnak Farm was a compound of about 100 acres on a desert stretch about 3 miles from Kandahar airport. Tatnak's main compound was encircled by a mud brick wall about 10 feet high. Inside were ca. 80 modest one- and two-story structures. Al Qaeda fighters and families lived there. Between 1996-99, Bin Laden built up the base and lived there intermittently. A CIA raid was planned to penetrate Tarnak, kidnap bin Laden in 1998, fly him out by US Special Forces. US Special Forces' helicopters attacked 3 vehicles, killing 16 and wounding one. The fourth vehicle was supposedly not attacked. The convoy was allegedly spotted by a drone. The Pentagon version of this incident is very questionable - how at night before firing the helicopters could tell that the 4th vehicle contained women and children? why the convoy was deemed to be an Al Qaeda one because the cars 'weaved', etc ? No idependent account exists as attack took place on a remote road in the middle of night [1 AM], and survivors of 4th vehicle [if any exist] have scattered. The target area was in the Adhi Ghar mountain. Pakistani sources say one US helicopter was shot down, 7 US troops and 15 Afghan ones were killed. troops of 82nd Airborne also p[articipated; independent report by Kathy Gannon says fighters escaped, US found "mules, lanterns, food..and vitamins," weapons, and NO bodies - the initially reported enemy casualties figures reported by Bagram were thus unfounded. The Adhi Ghar attack included house-to-house 'searches' [raids] in a nearby village. The fighting between US and mujahideen forces took place in the Maroof, Lowee Karez and Sheen Dand mountains of Spin Boldak. US dropped more than 120 bombs. Mujahideen were led by Taliban's Hafiz Raheem and Hizb-e-Islami's Abdul Majid. Mujahideen sources claim 32 US deaths. Baghran valley - village of Wilja	Helmand		0	0	US Special Forces and 82nd Airborne	contiuning raids and searches upon villages, many arrested/abducted. Estimates are 30-50 people abducted to Bagram for "questioning". Al Jazeera reported that 3 days of US bombings had killed over 100 civilians, around a village called Waleeja. The area is completely cordoned off by US forces and not even the Red Cross can enter. A resident, Ghulam Jilani, said Americans blocjked off the area and he reported seeing 50-60 bodies. A pro-military rant provided by K. Maurer [5/16/03] reveals that the operation involved 600 soldiers of the 82nd Airborne. Additional comments to Rawalpindi's entry

The family of the arrested Pakistani, Ahmed Abdul Qadus, says that the only people at home at the time of the 3 AM raid were family members [Munir Ahmad of the AFP]. Khalid was likely arrested a long time ago, namely in the Karachi raid of last Sept. 11th . Pak. intelligence could get little out of him and kept him 'on hold' when he could be used in a US propaganda effort [like now, to report his arrest and boost support for Bush's invasion of Iraq]. - according to former Pakistani ISI officer, Lt. General Hameed Gul [see Shahzad, 3/8/03]. The areas of Chagai [Baluchistan] and Chitral [NWF] have long been known to be hideouts for Al Qaeda and allies.

Note:

Since published the above tabulation, a question has been raised about whether the sources for a particular incident I cite might all be relying upon a single news agency report. As far as I know---and frequently news paper articles do NOT mention the particular news press release or particular possible on-site reporter---I have NOT deliberately engaged in such practice. I do believe that if separate newspaper stories report a particular story [without expressing reservations], then this reflects a de facto judgment by the newspaper staff about the veracity of the report and I count this as a separate source. Frequently, different sources cite different civilian casualty figures. When these sources seem credible, I simply report a range [e.g., 11 - 16]. If the reports cite different figures, they likely do NOT come from the same source. Whenever possible, I have tried to locate first-hand accounts, or statements by persons present [and still alive] at the bombing attack. In some cases, I have reported only a single number, for either of two reasons: [1] only that figure was mentioned; and [2]. more often than not, I have lent greater credibility to a 'story' if it presented a more detailed, rich account. In some cases, though, I had to rely on a single report
